About Camp Mewar

Camp Mewar on Ketkiya is set in a thickly wooded ten acres plot, sharing a common boundary with the Tiger reserve on its south. The camp gets its name from the 'Ketkiya Nala', a stream which trickles along its edge. 'Ketkiya-Kewra' - (Pendanus) a fragrant flowering plant that grows in the abundance along the banks. Tigers are usually in residence at Ketkiya.

A picturesque drive over perennial streams, through fields and hutments, the camp is a mere fifteen minutes drive from the park entrance. It comprises of 4 Aodhis (cottages in the design of hunting towers of the erstwhile rulers of Mewar), 5 Tents and 3 Wood-thatch Huts.

Accommodation

The 'Aodhis' (cottages in the design of hunting towers of the erstwhile rulers of Mewar) are close together overlooking a grassland. They have masses of space including a dressing area and bath. The 'Aodhis' include a walled in courtyard ideal for camp-fires and a terrace to enjoy the starlight nights or wide expanses of rural India.

Strwn along the game-reserve boundary, the 5 Tents and 3 Huts have a six feet verandah encompassing them. The Tents are constructed areas with a canvas canopy for a tented effect. The interiors of both the Tents and Wood-thatch Huts are similar.

Tiger At Bandhavgarh

Bandhavgarh National Park is possibly the best national park in India to view Asian Tigers.

Bandhavgarh is a relatively small park, with an area of around 448 sq km. However in the last few years this former game reserve has become one of India's most prominent National Parks. The major reason for all the interest is Bandhavgarh's high density of Tigers, which roam the mixed forests of in search of an easy kill.

Bandhavgarh was formerly the preferred hunting place for the Kings of Rewa. The density of tiger population at Bandhavgarh is the highest known in India - 60 Tigers within the 450 sq km area of Bandhavgarh National Park. This is also White Tiger country. The last known was captured by Maharaja Martand Singh in 1951. This White Tiger, named Mohan, is now stuffed and display in the place of Maharajah Of Rewa. The Tigers have not only bolstered the local population by breeding successfully, they have also brought international media attention to the park and the plight of the Royal Bengal Tiger.
