Wildlife Safari's At Nagarhole National Park

The Kabini River runs between Bandipur and Nagarahole, two of the richest National Parks at the foothills of the Western Ghats in Southern India. These forests cover around 1500 sq. km (580 sq. miles) and are a mix of tropical moist and dry deciduous types.

The region around Kabini River supports tree species like Teak, Mathi, Dindla, Sandalwood, Rosewood and many more along with Bamboo and other grasses. The fauna boasts more than 300 species of birds, including the endemic Malabar Trogon and Malabar Pied Hornbill, the Crested Hawk-Eagle.

There is an impressive assemblage of herbivores like the Asiatic Elephant, the Gaur (Indian Bison) and the Sambar, which results in a high density of prey in this region. This in turn, supports a large and thriving population of predators like the Tiger (incidentally, the Nagarahole region is said to have the highest density of Tigers in India), the Leopard and the Indian Wild Dog.

The backwaters of the Kabini Lake are now an important perennial water source where one can witness the largest and most spectacular congregations of Asiatic Elephants during peak summers.

Land or water safaris (by jeep and boat) into the tourism zone of the National Park are conducted twice a day. A qualified naturalist will accompany you on every trip to help you interpret the exotic flora and fauna of the region.

Joy rides in the forest on elephant-back are also offered during morning safaris.

Safaris (by jeep and boat) are subject to permission from the Karnataka Forest Department. Please note that safaris are primarily governed and controlled by the Forest Department and are subject to change or even cancellation from time to time.
